

The mode of application is to paint the seat of pain with a drop or two in a camel's hair pencil - & then you may apply a bit of thin rag (just & keep the tincture in contact with the skin) - & wet the back of the rag with the brush in the same way. A fraction of a drop of the Red introduced into an aching tooth cures it on the spot.

It is by no means dear - the most convenient form - a little bottle with stopper & glass cap, into which you can pour a few drops for use, & return the surplus, costing only 2s. -

Please get up a ~~bad~~ face-ache as soon as you can, for the pleasure of curing it - & recommend it to all your friends. Lord DeBleigh has seen marvellous cures effected by it - & tho' we have as yet had no occasion to try it here, it has given marvellous relief in face-ache to the nurse at The Moor.

Your friend Lieut. Burton is a right pleasant correspondent, & evidently a marvellous speculum worker. - & gives kind love. See dearest Arthur your most affectionate

My dearest Arthur,

I feel much obliged to Mr. Martin, and will enclose him a note, which I dare say you will kindly let him have some time. It will keep it. If it is not in your way, I shall feel much obliged by your giving the book his room just at present. I am very glad to find that the Commission is going on so actively.

I have read Horrox with great interest and fully agree in your appreciation of a very wonderful man - to whom as you say very inadequate justice has been done.
But I wish the Translator had had the
