

For we have no present idea of visiting London.

Most people here have been suffering from influenza - we hope you & yours have escaped. My wife had had it badly but is recovering now. I ought to be very thankful for health so much restored - I am not quite well - that is medically - but perfectly so as to all the activities & pursuits of life: & should I never be better than I am I should have reason to be more than satisfied.

Do you know anything of young Sadler the son of the Rector of Hornton? He promises to be one of the first observers of the rising generation, & a rival to Burnham - I shall send you, if you please, before long, a note of his on St. Gem: as a communication for the Society.

My wife's kind love & I remain, ever
Dear Mr. Arthur

your very affectionate friend

Deffro! mae Dydd.

Did I ever tell you that this is the motto of the Bardic Chain at ~~Delam~~ Castle? -

Have you ever had an opportunity of enquiring about the curious old book I asked you about?
