My dearest Arthur

You will think me the greatest bove alive! Most unwillingly am I troubling you again in a business matter - but do I not know your unwearied friendship - and do I not feel sure that had I time to enter into all particulars by this post, you wd feel what reason I have to appeal to your kindness. But to be as brief as I can.

Halifax Wyatt says his Solicitor advises him that we (i. e. the contributors to poor Emma's maintenance) are responsible for her debts. Her brother of course is - but I have withstood the idea for myself - <sup>being</sup> not of kin, nor kin at law - tho' I suppose my wife wd have a claim to a share of intestate effects - if there shd prove to be any.

Then, considerable expenses having been
