

Hardwick Vicar. 13 April 1871.

(32) <sup>38</sup> My dear Mr. Arthur,

I will do my best, to meet your wish. But you will not expect too much, for, excepting always the N.T. I hardly ever see a Greek book now. And to begin with - the only Lexicon I can find - that of Scapula, does not contain εὐστροφία. The general sense however I think is as follows. -

"But about the time when he was truly employed in Greece, a portent of the following kind <sup>for, such as this</sup> (τοιαύτη) occupied the heavens - a crown, similar to a rainbow, encompassing the orb of the Sun, darkened the sunbeams — But when he earnestly entreated (ἐκστήσει) Apollonius
